O. G. Receives New Members At Breakfast Meeting

Eight affiliated and nine new members were received into the Otterbein Guild at the Thanksgiving breakfast November 21 at the home of Mrs. A. P. Vannice, Guild counselor.

Mary Miller, junior of Dawson, secretary of Thank-offering, led the Thanksgiving praise service. Five girls lighted candles sympolizing thankfulness for a new appreciation of Jesus' teachings of prayer and faith, a new feeling of brotherhood, an appreciation of the essential things of life, and a deeper appreciation of missionaries that are developing from the war. Rev. Hostetter Leads Students In Week of Religious Emphasis

"The Nature of Man" was the subject discussed by the Rev. Mark Hostetter, pastor of the Statton Memorial United Brethren Church in Kansas City, Missouri, in his series of chapel talks to college students during religious emphasis week, November 15-19. Evening meetings were held at the ollege church during the same Specific topics which were taken ap each day were as follows: "Is Man Mind?"; "Is Man Body?"; The Image of God"; and "The Abundant life."

"Mind is a very powerful force "Mind comes into the task of the church to take all the parts of life and put them into one harmonized whole. Man is something deeper and broader than mind."

The middle ages and the present age represent two extremes of thought toward the pody. Men strove in the middle ages to subdue all the desires of the body. Our age says to enjoy the body and over-emphasizes sense thrills. The result of the middle ages was, the Renaissance with rapid progress in sciences. The result of our age is an over self-confidence.

"Sow to the wind and of the whirlwind reap destruction. Body must come to fit in the picture of If life is higher than the mind it is more important than the thrills of the body" concluded the Rev. Mr. Hostetter Wednesday.

God gave man the right to control the earth and the right to control himself, according to Mr. Hostetter, who discussed the 'Image of God." What in man is the image of God?

"Man is not only a spirit, but a body. He is a creature of conlicts and paradoxes. Because of this he needs a Savior. There is no ultimate end to being unless man's self-consciousness, which is the image of God, comes into contact with a Redeemer, and unless he gets rid of these paradoxes."

To arrive at the supreme glory of man's nature he must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Salvation is the only way to redemption. God in His infinite grace and mercy has provided salvation through a Savior.

Rev. Hostetter's closing thought was: "Always keep Christ at the center of your thinking and of your living."

Recruits Plan Just Peace

"Planning for a Just Peace" was the problem brought before the Life Work Recruits on the evening of Nov. 15.

LeRoy Bott, junior of Alexanda Just Peace?" said there should be no dictated peace, but that an agreement including all nations must be reached. All nations have has a right to infringe upon another. There must be a recognition of all racial and religious orders.

Denny Auchard, freshman of a hurried and inefficient peace

Irene Falk, sophomore Stromsburg, brought out the point that wars are not won by "Symbols" and "Slogans" alone, but Toward by "Faith" and "Sharing". "De-Sterling. peace and pursue it."

Basic English

Of the millions of people in the know what is meant by Basic Engtion will not know the meaning of Basic English. At this time it is especially important to understand its functions and purposes. On its success is based the happiness of every man, woman, and child on the earth. It will be used as an auxiliary language for those who find it necessary to communicate internationally with others.

Basic English does not concern the English language only; it will be used as a means of universal interpretation. It is no new idea, having been discovered years ago and having been developed and

Only the Chinese tongue challenges its position of widespread use. Russian has 120,000,-000 speakers; German and Spanish, 100,000,000 each; Japanese, 80,000,000; French, 75,000,000; Cantonese and Bengali, 60,000,-000 each; and Italian and Portuguese, 50,000,000 each. With the exception of Chinese, English is the only major language from which a basic tongue can be derived. Basic English is not a vocabulary to be given to the foreign student with indifference as to whether or not he succeeds in his study, but is a living and flexible language in its own right to be used for the purpose of understanding and utility between races of different tongues. Perhaps the most persuasive fact about Basic English is that instead of requiring years of study to pentrate its knowledge it requires a matter of about sixty hours to obtain a working vocabulary. Even the English speaking student will find gain in studying this Basic language. He will have a firm foundation of normal English upon which he may build his larger vocabulary of English. He will have acquired the gifts of analysis and perception from the study of this Basic list. Which Day For Thanks

It is true that Thanksgiving comes but once a year. What about the rest of the year? Do we set aside just one day on It is intended as a secondary lanwhich to be thankful?

There are 364 more days. These days are full of blessings. Many times we are thankful for things during the remainder of the year. Let us be sure to give the thanks where they are due.

We can look all around us and see and think of things for which we should be thankful. We must be truly thankful and not be smug as the Pharisee of old. As the hymn says, "Count your many blessings, see what God hath done."

The education department of York College has an important part to play in the life of nearly every student who attends the college. This is true from both a cultural and a practical standpoint. The cultural courses include introduction to education, history of education, and philosophy of education. Introducing NATURE MAG-

Now, don't go 'way; you could have lots of fun with it—really you could—if you'd only around long enough to get acquainted.

In the November issue you will meet-(get ready, girls, let's all squeal together) -- Mike, the prison mouse. And making her debut is Rima, the capooa, who is no ordinary capybara (whatever that is; "anyhoo", we can add a $7.98word to our vocabularies).

In NATURE MAGAZINE there is always star-gazing to be done. Clever hints on photography are a regular feature. Information concerning microscopy is present in every number. (It looks as if that might have something to do with a microscope. Let's consult Webster. Yes, he says that it means the use of- and investigation with a microscope. The accent is on "cross".) Close contact is kept with the vitally important field of conservation, to protect our wild life and conserve our natural resources having been one of the primary reasons for the founding of NATURE MAGAZINE twenty-two years ago by the American Nature Association. The rotogravure section always has an amazing collection of Nature pictures with full descriptive captions; the Book Review and School Departments offer much helpful and interesting information; and each issue carries other articles on Nature's various phases.

There! That is what you can expect to find every month. Now to Rima and Mike!

"'M'nheer, I need money,' said the old man. 'I come to sell my capooa. I go home to die on my farm and I must have small money to die with.' He pulled gently on the string and the capooa went to his side. His hand fell to her head. He fondled her ears, her neck, her hard, dry muzzle."

This sightless old man had come to sell his eyes, for she was truly that, having served her master in the capacity of a "seeing-eye"

"Rima was a capybara" (pronounced as it looks and with the accent on "bar") "called a capooa in Surinam. This is a kind of monstrous guinea-pig, three feet long and two feet high at the shoulder. The capybara is an oddity of Nature. It inhabits South America. It is the largest rodent in the world, and is often erroneously described as a giant Capybaras are tailless and have bodies not unlike well-fed pigs, clothed in short, coarse, reddish-brown hair. They live in and by the great rivers and are the cleanest of wild creatures. Rima was no exception. She was ultra-fastidious about her person."

(There are several her in the magazine.)

Ivan T. Sanderson tells how he bought her, saw her former master off on the boat, and adopted the capooa-alone among the hundreds of animals that passed through his hands-into his own household. It is fun to read about the Dutch lady's swooning at dinner at the appearance above the table of Rima's enormous head. And the time she negotiated the steps and plumbing and took a bath in the family tub-so vehemently that she sent a cascade of water down the staircase, and so gleefully that it took a half hour to persuade her to desist and two strong men to convey her twohundred-pound person down the She so completely won over the family that they removed the back seat from their automobile in order that she could "derive the full benefit of the fresh air while observing the scenery. What a picture it must have made to the natives—a white man driving about in an antiquated Rollspeared larger than himself! Sanderson tells a good story The library has his full-length book, ANIMAL TREASURE.

"Mike, A Prison Mouse," an ar- H. S. PRINCIPAL ticle by Raymond Moseley, begins in the following manner: "Bees, butterflies, house-flies, cock-roaches, snakes, terrapins, birds, cats, ants, snails, rabbits, beetles, gnats, moths, grasshoppers, guppies -such an imposing list that frogs"the reader wonders if it can possibly be terminated in any other way than with a dash followed by "November". But as he reads on, he discovers that all the above-named and more have been adopted as pets by prisoners. Mike, "an atom of life with a tail twice as long as his one-inch self" was tricked while foraging for food on one of his noctural visits to an inmate's cell and "sold his liberty for a peanut". How he was "lured into a semi-friendship" with his cell-mate, shared his rations, spent hours gamboling on a specially-constructed wheel of screen-door-wire, and all his cute little "mouse-ways" are cleverly related in this unusual article. And then there's "The Perfect Hobby". Three guesses what Paul W. Churcher thinks the perfect hobby is. Ready! Aim! "Is it collect-Guess number one: ing? You know, that is an inclination many of us are born with, and would carry to the grave, if graves were larger.

"No, it is not collecting." "Is it travel? In normal times that has quite a universal ap-

"No, it is not travel."

"In the particular magazine beng reviewed, it couldn't be Nature; could it? What is Nature that It could offer the perfect hobby?"

"'Nature is many things. It is the tonic that takes you out into the open; to the sweep of snow in winter, white across the hills; to April's green and gold, October's flame; to a new life that shapes your brain and blood and being. It is an education, full of immediate satisfaction, devoid of later regret. It is the companionship of chickadees in a winter hedge, the scarlet flash of cardinals in the tree tops, the relaxation of moonlight . . . If you would have hobby, try Nature. Whether it be butterflies or leaf patterns; whether it be birds or trees or sunsets; the wind and clouds and sky . . . The lift that will be yours will be never-ending, the value of it will be infinitely above value.' "

ADDRESSES STUDENTS

There would be no need of edueation if the fundamentals Christian living were understood and practiced, according to H. V. Taylor, principal of York high school, in talking to college students in the chapel period, November 12, during education week.

"An educated man is one who can be happy alone, high minded in drudgery, can see beyond sin, know how to live, how to love, and how to pray; he is one who likes to live and is not afraid to die," stated Mr. Taylor. "The present generation, supposedly the most highly educated one, has three accomplishments to boast of: the bloodiest century in history, highest rate of insanity, and ten years of depression in the midst of plenty.'

Education must include much of the teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ. We must have a religious life which is positive, concluded Mr. Taylor.
